GENERAL BIBLIOGRAPHY

I. ORIGINAL SOURCES

A. Records of Central and State Governments in the India Office, now called Commonwealth Relations Office (CRO), Library, National Archives of India, and Record Offices in various States in India. There are also valuable records in the Portuguese, Dutch and French Archives.

B. Parliamentary Papers. Specially valuable are: I. The Reports of Committees appointed by the Parliament to consider (i) specific questions, such as those concerning land revenue, land settlement and other important administrative problems; (ii) the renewal of East India Company's Charter in 1833 and 1853; and (iii) important legislation for changes in Indian Constitutions. II. Minutes of debates in Parliament in connection with Indian affairs.

C. Private Papers and correspondence of British statesmen, Secretary of State for India, and Governors-General, Governors and other high officials in India. These are mostly preserved in the CRO, British Museum, Public Record Office and other places in U.K.

D. Contemporary documents like autobiographies, memoirs, diaries and letters of eminent persons, including officials, private individuals and foreign visitors, as well as treaties, reports and proceedings of committees and councils.
