RABINDRANATH TAGORE'S NEW DRAMA

The King of the Dark Chamber

By

RABINDRANATH TAGORE

Nobel Prizeman in Literature, 1913; Author of "Gitan-12 mo, $1.25

"The real poetical imagination of it is unchangeable; the allegory, subtle and profound and yet simple, is cast into the form of a dramatic narrative, which moves with unconventional freedom to a finely impressive climax; and the reader, who began in idle curiosity, finds his intelligence more and more engaged until, when he turns the last page, he has the feeling of one who has been moving in worlds not realized, and communing with great if mysterious presences."

Chitra

A Play in One Act

Cloth, 12mo. $1.00

This is a little lyrical drama based upon an incident in the Mahabharata. In the course of his wanderings in fulfillment of a vow of penance Arjuna comes to Manipur. There he sees Chitrangada, the daughter of Chitravahana, the king of the country. Smitten with her charms, he asks the king for the hand of his daughter. Out of the king's reply and the conditions which he imposes upon Arjuna the story develops. It is a rare bit of idealistic writing, as beautiful in its thought as it is in expression.

"We did not look for an Oriental even though a seer, to write a book (especially twenty-five years ago when this was written) that might serve as example to the most advanced among modern Occidental women—yet this is just what Tagore has done. Extended comment upon Mr. Tagore's play is unnecessary. It is at once as clear and as profound as a mountain pool." N. Y. Times.

The Post Office

Cloth, 12mo, $1.00; leather, $1.75.

"... filled with tender pathos and spiritual beauty. There are two acts, and the story is that of a frail little Indian lad condemned to seclusion and inaction by ill health. He makes a new world for himself, however, by his imagination and insatiable curiosity, and the passersby bring the world of action to him. The play has been presented in England by the Irish Players, and fully adapts itself to the charming simplicity and charm which are their principal characteristics." Phila. Public Ledger.

"A beautiful and appealing piece of dramatic work." Boston Transcript.

"Once more Tagore demonstrates the universality of his genius; once more he shows how art and true feeling know no racial and no religious lines." Kentucky Post.

"One reads in 'The Post Office' his own will of symbolism. Simplicity and a pervading, appealing pathos are the qualities transmitted to its lines by the poet." N. Y. World.

"He writes from his soul; there is neither bombast nor didacticism. His poems bring one to the quiet places where the soul speaks to the soul surely but serenely." N. Y. American.

SADHANA: THE REALIZATION OF LIFE. A volume of essays $1.25

All four by Rabindranath Tagore, translated by the author from the original Bengali.

Rabindranath Tagore is the Hindu poet and preacher to whom the Nobel Prize was recently awarded.

I would commend these volumes, and especially the one entitled "Sadhana," the collection of essays, to all intelligent readers. I know of nothing, except it be Maeterlinck, in the whole modern range of the literature of the inner life that can compare with them.

There are no preachers nor writers upon spiritual topics, whether in Europe or America, that have the depth of insight, the quickness of religious apprehension, combined with the intellectual honesty and scientific clearness of Tagore.

Here is a book from a master, free as the air, with a mind universal as the sunshine. He writes, of course, from the standpoint of the Hindu. But, strange to say, his spirit and teaching come nearer to Jesus, as we find Him in the Gospels, than any modern Christian writer I know.

He does for the average reader what Bergson and Eucken are doing for scholars; he rescues the soul and its faculties from their enslavement to logic-chopping. He shows us the way back to Nature and her spiritual voices.

He rebukes our materialistic, wealth-mad, Western life with the dignity and authority of one of the old Hebrew prophets.

He opens up the meaning of life. He makes us feel the redeeming fact that life is tremendous, a worth-while adventure. "Everything has sprung from immortal life and is vibrating with life. LIFE IS IMMENSE."

Tagore is a great human being. His heart is warm with love. His thoughts are pure and high as the galaxy.

The Autobiography of Devendranath Tagore

Translated from the Original Bengali by
Satyendranath Tagore and Indira Devi

With an Introduction by Evelyn Underhill

Cloth, $2.00

"This book is one more amongst the small number of authentic histories of the soul; it must rank with the few classic autobiographies bequeathed to us by certain of the mystics and saints. It is essentially of the same class as the Testament of Ignatius Loyola, the Journal of George Fox. The whole life of the intricately-blended human creature living 'eternal life in the midst of time'—not the mere factual happenings, not alone the intuitions, the meditations, and the dreams, but the whole rich complex of elements both finite and infinite, the growth and change, the slow becoming of the soul—this it is which such books bring home to the reader's mind.

* * * * *

"Nothing perhaps could contrast more strongly with the normal Western idea of the Indian mystic than the Maharshi's long and active career, the character of the vision which inspired it, the doctrine which he taught. The Christian promise of 'more abundant life' as a fruit of the love and knowledge of God has received no clearer fulfilment. His missionary labours, his arduous and enthusiastic pilgrimages, his genius for friendship, his deep passion for nature, his sane and balanced outlook upon humanity, his intense interest in the events of his time, no less than the ecstatic life of contemplation which ran side by side with his active career—all are rooted in this. He was no amateur of a thin and rarefied spirituality, but that rare creation, a whole man."
