TABLE OF CONTENTS.

LECTURE I.
INTRODUCTORY ; THE GENERAL PROBLEM OF THE CRITICAL PHILOSOPHY.

The "Return to Kant"—Its significance and causes—Development of English Thought as leading to the Critical problem—Natural Science, especially in Germany, and its relation to Kant's philosophy—Speculative questions involved in Kantianism—The Transcendental Method as distinguished from the psychological or the scientific—Kant's mode of stating the fundamental problem of the theory of knowledge—Historical antecedents—Hume—Leibnitz—Synthesis as the essence of Cognition—Analytic and Synthetic Judgments—The several factors involved in real Cognition—Space and Time—The Categories . . . pp. 1-44

LECTURE II.
KANT'S THEORY OF KNOWLEDGE.

The subjective processes involved in real Cognition—Sense, Imagination, Understanding—The objective significance of real Cognition—Unity of Self-consciousness and Cognition—Productive Imagination and Schematism—Relation between Intuition and Understanding—Kant's mode of stating this relation, and the difficulties of his statement—Kant on Causation—Analysis of his argument, and consideration of objections to it—Kant's treatment of Subjective Idealism—His view of Psychology—Summary of the theory of Cognition—Its true significance—Limited and relative character of Cognition, properly so called—Understanding and Reason—The Thing-in-Itself—Reason and the Thing-in-Itself—Importance of the notion of Noumena for the further development of the Critical system—Transition to Metaphysic—Significance of the Critique of Metaphysic—Rational Psychology. . . . . pp. 45-86

LECTURE III.

METAPHYSICAL IDEA OF THE CRITICAL PHILOSOPHY.

Reason and its function—The problems of Metaphysic—Antinomy and its significance—The critical solution of Antinomy—The idea of Freedom, and the relation thought by Kant between Noumenal and Phenomenal—Reason and the idea of God—The category of Reciprocity and its importance—Kant's Critique of Theology—Result of Kant's criticism of Metaphysic—Reason and Understanding—Empirical contingency, and the faculty of Judgment—Principle of the Intelligibility of Nature as yielding regulative maxims—The notion of End, and the idea of an intuitive understanding—Ethical Teleology—Consequent transition to the practical sphere of Reason—Freedom and Duty—The possibility of a law of obligation—Formal character of the Kantian Ethics—The ethical Antinomy and its solution—The Postulates of Practical Reason—Their import—Reason as Speculative and as Practical—The notion of End as the final mediating element both in speculation and in practice—Judgment and the notion of End—Mechanism and Final Cause—General principle on which the judgment of Final Cause rests—Empirical contingency and End—The idea of an Intuitive Understanding—End and Organisms—Ethical Teleology as the final result of the Kantian philosophy.

pp. 87-139
LECTURE IV.

RECENT DEVELOPMENTS OF KANTIANISM.

NOTES.

LECTURE I. pp. 139-206
II. 207-217
III. 218-240
IV. 241-248

APPENDIX I.—Kant's Refutation of Idealism 249-252

APPENDIX II.—Kritik der Urtheilskraft, § 76 253-262