about another can take root and flourish.

Let those who aim at the right life, who believe that they love Truth, cease to passionately oppose themselves to others, and let them strive to calmly and wisely understand them, and in thus acting toward others they will be conquering themselves; and while sympathizing with others, their own souls will be fed with the heavenly dews of kindness, and their hearts be strengthened and refreshed in the pleasant Pastures of Peace.

7. Forgiveness.

The book expounds those right states of mind and wise modes of action which, when adopted under trying circumstances, bring about results fruitful of blessedness. The principles put forth are applicable to the common circumstances of daily life, in which all are frequently involved, and upon the wrong or right use of which all our misery or happiness depends; and those who put these principles into practice will very rapidly prove for themselves that circumstances are subordinate to the human will, and as the potter moulds the unsightly clay into shapes of beauty, so the spiritual potter (he who has acquired the right state of mind) brings out of "adverse conditions" results that are precious, beautiful, and blessed.

JAMES ALLEN'S
Book of Meditations
For Every Day in the Year

James Allen may truly be called the Prophet of Meditation. In an age of strife, hurry, religious controversy, heated arguments, ritual and ceremony, he came with his Message of Meditation, calling men away from the din and strife of tongues into the peaceful paths of stillness within their own souls, where "the Light that lighteth every man that cometh into the world" ever burns steadily and surely for all who will turn their weary eyes from the strife without to the quiet within. Many of the Meditations were written as he came down from the Cairn in the early morning, where—like One he loved—he spent those precious hours alone with God while the world slept on. Others are gleaned from his many writings, published and unpublished, and are arranged for daily reading at his request, and, we believe, under his spiritual guidance. The book must ever be a stronghold of Spiritual Truth and Blessing to all who read it, especially to those who use it for daily devotion and meditation. Its great power lies in that it is the heart of a good man who lived every word he wrote. Every reader of James Allen's books should possess a copy of his Meditations. The beautiful half-tone portrait is a speaking likeness of the Author. It was taken only six weeks before his translation, and has not been published before.

Beautifully Bound in Purple Pegamoid, padded covers, silk sewn, round corners, edges all gilt, and purple ribbon marker. A handsome book, beautiful both inside and out.

"A book of very special interest has just been published, entitled James Allen's Book of Meditations for Every Day in the Year. Every reader of James Allen's works should possess a copy of his Meditations. The book, which contains a meditation for every day in the year, is beautifully bound in purple pegamoid, padded covers, silk sewn, and with gilt edges. Morning and Evening Thoughts

By LILY L. ALLEN

The Author in her Preface says: “In going through the books written by James Allen, to cull from them these Morning and Evening Thoughts, I have felt over and over again the force of the truth contained in every page: and knowing, as I do, the writer as no one else knows him; seeing him as I have, for many years under all circumstances, in the hours of work and leisure, in the days of joy and sorrow, in the sunshine and in the cloud, I know that these writings are not the words of an idle brain, nor are they gathered from other writings, nor picked up here and there, but they are the deep experiences of his own heart, and were first lived and then written. Therefore I send forth this little book, knowing it cannot fail on its mission—knowing it is alive because it has been lived—and am confident that those who use it for daily meditation must feel its power and realize its blessing, because it is the actual experience of a life.”

In the Garden of Silence

By LILY L. ALLEN
(With Portrait)

Author's Foreword:

"When I was a very little child we lived in an old house around which were old-world gardens full of the dear old-fashioned flowers; long stone paths, edged with the low box borders, meandered in and out under the fruit trees, and in the quiet evening hundreds of nightingales made the air alive with song. And I, a little wondering maiden, used to wander alone in the great garden, peeping into all the flowers for angel faces, sometimes stooping down to lift up the hanging bell to gaze into its depths, and again standing on tiptoe to look over the edge of the big silent lily, or into the deep heart of the rose, always looking, and always expecting to find those angel faces. All down the long paths I wandered, listening, always listening for voices that I knew were speaking, if I could only hear. Since then long years have passed away, and I have found the Garden of Silence at last; and, finding it, I have found the angel faces and heard those silent voices for which my heart yearned so long ago in that other garden. And believing that what I have seen, and what I have heard, may comfort others, I, in this little book, pass on a portion of all that has come to me in my Garden of Silence."

The Might of Mind

or How to Control and use the Power of Thought

By LILY L. ALLEN

(Mrs. James Allen)

Author of "Our Mental Children," and Editor of "The Epoch."

The emphatic and attractive title of this work should arrest the attention and arouse the curiosity of every reader of "Higher Thought Literature." Throughout this original work the Author sticks to her text, and shows with considerable sagacity and foresight how and why the human mind can control and use thought. The various chapters of this work are not a series of undefined theories. They contain practical lessons upon the best methods for cultivating and developing those inherent powers which give strength, fitness, and wisdom to those qualities which alone can give the initiative in controlling and directing thought for the practical advancement of moral and spiritual tone and growth. The author has produced a work which will be highly helpful to the young beginner in the study of the power of mind, and the advanced pupil will find many beautiful thoughts of a highly suggestive character which will greatly aid one in the silent studies of the home.
