THE CASE FOR CAPITALISM

By HARTLEY WITHERS. Author of "The Meaning of Money," &c.

To make a better world we want better men and women. No reform of laws and institutions and economic systems will bring it unless it produces them. Institutions and systems that turn men and women into machines working under the control of officials, or of monopolies, will not make them better, even if as is very far from likely, they made them better off. It is only through facing life's problems for ourselves, making our own mistakes and scoring our own hits, that we can train and hammer ourselves into something better. Individual freedom, initiative and enterprise have been the life-blood of the Anglo-Saxon race, and have made it what it is, pre-eminent among the races of the world because its men and women can think and act for themselves. If we throw away this heritage because we think that regulation and regimentation will serve us better, we shall do a bad day's work for ourselves and for human progress. And yet this seems to be the object to which many earnest and sincere reformers are now trying to lead us, when they ask us to accept nationalization of industry, or its organization under Guild monopolies, as a remedy for the evils which are evident in our economic system. If they succeed life will cease to be an adventure and become a dull, the tendency to variation which, as science teaches us, is the secret of development, will be killed or checked, and we shall be standardized like Government boots.

This book is written to show that the greater output of goods and services, on which material progress depends, cannot be expected with certainty under any form of Socialism that has yet been proposed; that Capitalism does not rob anybody, but has wrought great benefits for all classes, and that, if improved and expanded as it may be without any sudden change in human nature such as other systems demand, it may earn for us the great material advance that is needed to provide us with a better, nobler, and more beautiful world.
FIFTY YEARS OF LONDON SOCIETY
Anonymous

It is so seldom that the reading public is afforded an opportunity of becoming acquainted with the real leaders of London Society, their doings, and sayings, that this anonymous author's work is likely to become a classic of its genre. Apart from the innumerable personages of all ranks whose figures are outlined, there are many examples of that outdoor life of London Society which can be studied by all classes by day and by night. There are, for example, something more than peeps at Piccadilly and its surroundings when that locality is seen at its liveliest; glimpses of the West End when those composing the great world throng the shopping streets, and Hyde Park and Rotten Row when they are fullest.

Piquant anecdotes abound, and altogether this remarkable volume bids fair to be the talk of town and country for months.

MOTHERS AND SONS
By C. GASQUOINE HARTLEY.

(Author of "The Truth about Woman," "Motherhood," etc.)
Cloth. lumpy 8vo. Price 9/- net.

This new and important book, by C. Gasquoine Hartley, is destined to place the mother in a new and, we trust, a noble light. Its purpose is to reveal the immense responsibility of parenthood.

The mother’s influence, and especially her influence over her sons, is a fact so well recognised, as well as lauded and sentimentalised upon, that to call attention to it may appear unnecessary. But the new knowledge that in recent years has been gained in the field of child psychology has given fresh meaning and interest to the deep enormous importance of the mother. We know now that her power is paramount over the child, not for the years of childish dependence only, but for adult life as well.

The fearlessly eloquent pen of C. Gasquoine Hartley, the brilliant author of "The Truth about Woman," deals with these questions, with a freedom and breadth, yet, with a seriousness and wealth of knowledge that challenges the attention of, and ought to be read by, every thinking man and woman. Many difficult problems are dealt with, and exact information is given concerning much we have been accustomed to guess at. The causes of the unhappiness and mistakes of life are inquired into, and the way in which many of them may be avoided is made plain. Deep insight is given into the real causes of much that we now misunderstand.

The sincerity of the writer breathes through every line. The book shows a fearless honesty and a deep sympathy and tolerance; it is the work of a serious student who knows life.
NATIONAL AND INTERNATIONAL LINKS

By T. H. S. ESCOTT.

Cloth. Demy 8vo. Price 12s. 6d. net.

The purpose of the book is to trace by a variety of chiefly personal instances the gradual development of Anglo-European, Anglo-American friendship, as well as the individual personal incidents influencing the rise and progress of other British relations, social or political, beyond seas. As regards the chief English portions of the work, the men and women, the social intellectual, spiritual as well as secular interests, represented by these and linking different periods together, it is hoped fresh, interesting and instructive illustration.

AUCTION BRIDGE MADE EASY

By A. E. MANNING FOSTER

(Author of "Auction Bridge Table Talk".)

This book is a complete handbook on Auction Bridge with chapters on the new Contract Bridge and the latest developments of the game. It deals in a concise and lucid way with various points that perplex players, and explains in thorough fashion the first principles which every novice must master. The theory of declaring, over-holding, assisting one's partner, and the tactics of play are fully explained. Tables showing the correct leads from various combinations of cards are given. While the book will be of assistance to beginners, the alphabetical plan of arrangement will render it extremely useful to all players who desire a ready book of reference.

MORE HAUNTED HOUSES OF LONDON

By ELLIOTT O'DONNELL

(Author of "Haunted Highways and Byways.")

Cloth. Crown 8vo. Price 5s. net

In this new volume, which is a sequel to "Haunted Houses of London," published 12 years ago, Mr. Elliott O'Donnell, the well-known ghost hunter, presents a number of further cases of hauntings in London and suburban houses. Upper Norwood, Peckham, Hampstead, Wallington, Ealing, Kilburn, the Strand, Brook Street (Mayfair), Wimpole Street, Wigmore Street, and Red Lion Square, are some of the districts specially referred to, while some very thrilling accounts are given of nocturnal experiences with ghosts in a few of the London Parks and Commons, and on Waterloo and Westminster Bridges.
THE MAKING OF A REVOLUTIONARY

By HAMILTON WYE.

THE DEVONSHIRE CLUB
AND CROCKFORD'S

By H. T. WADDY.

With eight illustrations. Demy 8vo. Price 10/6 net.

The Graphic—"Contains much of fascinating interest to every Londoner who loves his West End."

Daily News—"Those, indeed, who would gain some interesting sidelights on London club life in the early and later years of the last century should not overlook Mr. H. T. Waddy's very readable story."

Westminster Gazette—"Mr. Waddy's history of the Club and his brief record of its predecessor is a very interesting one."

A PLEA FOR THE TREATMENT OF CANCER WITHOUT OPERATION

By ROBERT BELL, M.D.

Medical Times—"The non-success of experimental work in cancer research is ample reason for a fuller investigation of other methods for dealing with this dreadful disease... It is gratifying to learn that a number of medical men have now been converted to Dr. Bell's views. We sincerely hope that his book will be widely read."

Birmingham Daily Post—"The author states that "never has a single case of cancer been recorded which has proved to have been cured by operative 'surgery,'" and claims that by the use of an uncooked lacto-vegetarian diet, in association with some tablets and a hypodermic injection, he can alleviate, and in some cases, cure, cancer."
Fiction

HANDS OFF
By BEULAH MARIE DIX.

It is a wonderfully dramatic story which Beulah Marie Dix tells. Robert Amory steals the wife of his friend Justus Graves, and, years later, when Amory's son is drugged and robbed by thieves in Mexico, and finds himself on waking in the prison of Santa Clara, he is sentenced to a year's "forced labour" on Graves's ranch. The Alcade has, of course, been bribed by Graves, who subjects young Amory to the most monstrous cruelty, with the intention of returning him later to his father as human wreckage.

Graves, faithful believer in the saying that "the sins of the fathers shall be visited upon the children," fails to reckon with the way Fate laughs at the schemes of men, for his daughter Sarita falls in love with Ned Amory, and rides away with him to become his wife, after one of the most exciting escapes in fiction. "Hands Off" is a novel written with rare distinction, and should place Beulah Marie Dix among the foremost writers of fiction.

ONE MILLION FRANCS
By ARNOLD FREDERICK.

"One Million Francs" is the modest sum demanded day after day from the Count D'Este by an unknown criminal; in this case it may truly be said that money has wings, for, when the sum is placed on the table in the Count's library as a trap, carefully guarded by four men, it disappears into thin air.

The efforts made to recover it, headed by Richard Duvall, the detective, lead the reader into deep waters. A mysterious character, one Victor Girard, flits through the pages of the story, now appearing as a criminal of the deepest dye, and then suddenly coming to the rescue of Grace Elliott, the Count's niece, under the most astonishing circumstances.

The scene of the story is laid in Paris, and in spite of the dramatic episodes which crowd its pages, a gradually developing love story grips the reader's interest until the striking denouement which explains all that has gone before.

The story is unusually vivid and dramatic. The characters seem like real people, playing the game of love and adventure before our eyes. Not the least interesting feature of it lies in the fact that, unusual and striking as is the plot, it is taken from an actual episode of the underworld of Paris. You will like "One Million Francs." It is a detective story of the best type.
SURPRISES OF LIFE

By GEORGES CLEMENCEAU
(formerly Prime Minister of France), Author of "The Strongest," etc.

Crown 8vo. Cloth. 3½ net.

The book up the theme of Balzac, says H. M. Hyndman, "and his style is vivid with noisy and graceful with poetic thought." The stories deal with the provincial life of France, with the small landlords, as indigenous as they had grown out of the soil themselves. They have the reality and power of Balzac. Occasionally Clemenceau's pen goes to city, and here his keen, remorseless noisy etches as with acids, a clear and illuminating picture of contemporary life in France.

THE WORLD SHUT, OUT

By NORVAL RICHARDSON

A story full of the incomparable charm of Italy—the sunny charm of the Alban Hills above Rome. Young Galbraith goes to Italy to clear up matters in connection with an estate left him, in the absence of other heirs, by his grandfather, the old Principessa Valdragone. He finds a Mrs Francis from England occupying a lodge, on the estate, commanding a particular view, and apparently drawn to the spot by a strong compulsion. Back and forth between the two works the delightfully drawn figure of the old avvocato, Torrecella, until an unexpected and most dramatic incident reveals to Galbraith the true heir to the Villa Valdragone, the secret Mrs Francis has been hiding—and a romance.

MAGIC HOURS

By W. L. COMFORT

Two wonderful women, Mona Kelvin and Anna Elevan, lend to this swiftly moving tale a distinction quite its own.

All the mystery and gorgeous colour of the East is here—the narrow, crooked, lamp-lit streets of a Chinese Seapott, the hot dusty flatness of the desert towards Tibet, the cool, sharp air of the hill country at dusk. And like a silver thread through the warp and woof of the tale, runs the spell of intrigue and treachery. Old China plotting against Young China, with young Romney close to the heart of both.
THE BRIDGE OF TIME

By WILLIAM HENRY WARNER.

A powerful romantic story of ancient and modern times. The hero is a Prince of the House of Ramses who, by a magic potion of the High Priest, is transmigrated into the Europe of to-day. Through his eyes we see ourselves in ways that are strangely interesting. But the real theme of the story is the eternal theme of the love of a man for a woman, which is the power that unites the ages.

Strange as this blending of the ancient and modern may seem, the author's gifted imagination and art have produced a work unique in conception and permanent in charm. The conclusion is an ingenious and highly satisfying denouement.

BEHIND RED CURTAINS

By MANSFIELD SCOTT.

All the world loves a sleuth, and Inspector Malcolm Steele, we have a new character added to the famous detectives of fiction which will at once appeal to the interest of those who delight in the skillful untangling of mysterious events. And Inspector Steele, an entirely new type of investigator, had to be skilful, acute and discerning in solving the mystery in "Behind Red Curtains." Can a man under hypnotic influence commit a crime? If one goes through every step in a murder andawakes to find himself in bed, and the next morning finds marks of the crime on his hands, was he the murderer or not? These were the questions which troubled the members of the Copeland Party, but not Inspector Steele. He knew! Not only does "Behind Red Curtains" introduce a new character to fiction, but it marks the first effort of an author with the ability to write an absorbing, suspense-creating tale.

THE FULLERTON CASE

By R. DOUBLEDAY.

The mystery attached to the death of a prominent lawyer, an indictment against another member of the bar, based on circumstantial evidence, furnishes the theme of this engrossing story, which is one of the best detective novels since the famous "Leavenworth Case."

THE KENTUCKY WARBLER

By JAMES LANE ALLEN.

The author of "A Kentucky Cardinal" again tells a tale of the Blue Grass Country, and of a young hero who wanders off after a bird's note to find romance and the key to his own locked nature. The same delicate grace of style found in "A Kentucky Cardinal" is again revealed.

BOOK BY D'ANNUNZIO:

TALES OF MY NATIVE TOWN

By GABRIELE D'ANNUNZIO.

With an Introduction by JOSEPH HERGESHEIMER.

Gabriele D'Annunzio, who has startled Europe by his actions at Fiume, has long been one of the most picturesque figures in the world of letters. These tales of his native town are as different from our own short imaginative fiction as the town of Pescara, on the Adriatic Coast, is different from Bridlington on the North Sea.

The stories, which show the art of the great master at his best, are filled with energy and movement, and the emotions are in high keys.

NOVEL BY "THE TIGER."

THE STRONGEST

By GEORGES CLEMENCEAU. Prime Minister of France.

Morning Post—"It was a happy idea to issue at this moment a version in English of M. Clemenceau's novel "Les Plus Forts"... The story, singularly engaging in itself, derives a special interest from the circumstances of its authorship. It is not difficult to recognise in it an element of spirit and autobiography as well as a survey of social conditions of the period in which it is laid."

Daily Telegraph—"A powerful and often eloquent story... from behind the somewhat conventional framework of character and plot there burns the eager fire of an absorbing political and social ideal, an ideal which, issuing in protest towards the close of the story, becomes suddenly irradiated with the powerful eloquence of a convinced and compelling personality."

HEARTS OF WOMEN
By MORLEY ROBERTS.

The Times—"A story which, by its lucid characterization and passionate intensity, claims the respect of those who would not agree with the conclusions implied."
Manchester Guardian—"This eloquent and moving story."
Daily News—"The story is a very moving one, and there is strength as well as delicacy in the telling of it."
Observer—"The book is full of fine things, and original."
New Statesman—"The book is, in its way, a triumph."
Morning Post—"Although discuss the purpose of 'Hearts of Women' you inevitably must, still you can postpone doing so until the fervour and glow of the story have done their work."
Liverpool Courier—"Mr. Roberts has rarely risen to such high artistic levels in his work, and the sureness with which he handles his characters is wonderful."

The Best "Creepy" Novel since "In a Glass Darkly."

THE DOOR OF THE UNREAL
By GERALD BISS.

Daily Telegraph—"Mr. Biss knows how to hold the listener spellbound. The Ancient Mariner himself could not show an easier mastery of the grisly and infernal."
Daily Mail—"Mr. Biss grips the reader's attention from the opening pages."
Sir Wm. Robertson Nicoll in the British Weekly—"A powerful and fascinating story. This is not an ordinary detective work by any means."
New Statesman—"His book is a tale of lycanthropy, a very satisfactory experiment in the uncanny."
Tatler—"It is really a splendid mystery story. Mr. Biss keeps his readers on the tip-toe of excitement."
THE WIDENING CIRCLE

By the MARCHIONESS TOWNSEND.

Scotsman—This is the proper sort of book to read when taking a holiday at a Swiss hotel; but it should prove entertaining anywhere.

Pall Mall Gazette—The talk of the children is so good that we hope Lady Townsend will give us other and fuller studies of children.

Glasgow Herald—There is an attractive irresponsibility about the whole family charming novel.

Weekly Dispatch—She is to be congratulated on the skill with which she uses her material, for she knows how to tell a story in a lively and pleasant manner.

By the Author of 'The Choir Invisible.'

EMBLEMS OF FIDELITY

By James Lane Allen.

Sir William Robertson Nicoll in the British Weekly—'There are witty things and clever things in the book, and I do not mind saying that I read it through at a sitting.'

Scotsman—'An excellent piece of comedy.'

Glasgow Herald—'It is the lightest of light comedy.'

Richard King in The Tatler—'As a rule I am not particularly fond of stories written in letters. But I make exception of Mr. James Lane Allen's new work, 'Emblems of Fidelity' (Nash), and, as it were, take off my hat to it' as one of the most charmingly written stories of the present season.' The plot is slight. It concerns the misunderstanding which arose between the famous English novelist, Edward Blackthorne, and the famous young American novelist, Beverley Sands, when the former asked the latter to ship him over some Kentucky ferns, and Sands, who gave the order to a well-known florist, who promptly failed to dispatch it, failed to do so. There are also two love affairs running through the book, love affairs which leave the two young men, Beverley Sands and his friend, Ben Doolittle, alone and disconsolate at the end. It is not the story—it is not the story—though it is interesting and amusing enough—but the charm of the writing, the wit, the wisdom, and the broad humanity of it which makes 'Emblems of Fidelity' the kind of book which you want to read again and keep near you, recommending it only to those among your friends whose bump of honesty—especially of that honesty which returns borrowed books (a supreme test)—is so large as to be almost a disfigurement.
